

The big event of the coming week will be the lawn fete and dance to be given at the Country club next Friday evening by Samuel Newhouse, in honor of Miss Alice Gordon, daughter of Judge and Mrs. C. C. Goodwin, who has just returned from school. The affair is to be an elaborate one, and will doubtless eclipse in point of decoration all previous events at the Country club.

Did any one ever see such a bunch of girls as those at the punch table in the Library Friday? Well, despite the fact that the decorations were gorgeous, and the additional fact that there were no men there, all eyes were on the dainty bits of femininity behind the table. It would be difficult to find a like assortment elsewhere.

A dainty little frock which approached the 1830 style was seen at the Woodward dance last Monday evening, and made a refreshing contrast to the trained gowns which have been worn to date for so long. The gown was of sheer white material and frills edged with lace reached almost to the waist. The skirt stood out in true old-fashioned style and just cleared the dancing floor. A touch of yellow at the belt and shoulders made a glow which was extremely becoming to the dark-eyed girl who wore it.

And, speaking of gowns, there were some of the prettiest gowns seen at the affair spoken of that have been worn here for a long time. Perhaps the simplicity of summer dancing frocks is their special charm; certain it is that the most effective of the dresses were the simple ones. Most of them were of white, lace and thin materials being the favorites, apparently. One handsome frock was trimmed with a deep girde of black lace and finished in the back with knotted ribbons of the same white tone. The hostess set the example of white, wearing a beautiful gown of lace over white with no touch of color save the green and silver of the leaves in her hair.

Of all the delightful innovations inaugurated by the University club that of "gardeners," i. e., sitting on the roof garden and enjoying it, bids fair to be the most popular. Despite the attractive dance programme and coolness of the night which made dancing a pleasure, I noticed there were more pairs engaged in the new game than ever noted before.

Ada Dwyer (Mrs. Harold Russell), who has always been popular in her home town, has received a perfect deluge of homage during her present visit. She has been entertained by all the old friends in one way or another, and with her usual gracious manner has been delighted with everything that came. Mr. and Mrs. Russell and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Folsom of San Francisco were guests of honor at a high tea given last evening at the Kimball home on Main street. Mrs. Russell leaves Tuesday for her work.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Gertrude McClintock, a niece of the Downeys, came as a surprise to friends here, and more than one of the beaux of the city will temper his good wishes with sighs. Miss McClintock is one of the really charming girls, and they are not few either who have been a guest within the city gates.

Another interesting engagement is that of Miss Ruby Peyton, who left here in short frocks a few seasons ago, and whose affairs are still interesting to a wide circle. The lucky man is one of the best known young business men of Germantown, Pa.

There was a little dream of a girl just home from school at the Amelia Palace Friday. She wore a blue gown with a big picture hat of white, which set off her face like an exquisite cameo. She is of the slender type and had just enough vivacity to show an unspoiled school girl interest in everything. Doubtless she will be one of the summer belles.

The tennis grounds at the post are rapidly nearing completion and, according to the reports given by the tennis men in town, the officers at the post will need the grounds for severe practice before they can expect to compete with the men who use the little racquet in the city.

One delightful feature of the card party given Thursday by Mrs. Hubbard W. Reed was the mandolin and guitar music which floated in and out the open windows and made a beautiful party still more harmonious.

A large party of the younger society people have about completed plans for spending Independence day at Walker's farm. The many of the time of the past will be all outdone if the plans so far outlined materialize.
